ABOUT PEER ADVISORY COUNCILS

Peer Advisory Councils provide business leaders with an outlet to solve their most pressing problems and build consistent business growth directly from their peers. They have become an integral part of small and mid-sized business strategy. From our monthly sessions, our members gain:

- New ideas, innovations, and trends to watch
- Growth strategies
- Results from what works and what doesn't
- Insights on running a business
- Expertise and experience from like-minded individuals
- Trusted, unbiased advice
- Accountability for actions
- Clarity on direction and best practice

HOW COUNCILS ARE STRUCTURED

- 6-12 industry-focused, yet non-competitive members
- ½ day (4-hour) monthly meeting
- Structured sessions covering a variety of relevant topics
- Professionally led by a certified moderator
- Virtual meetings minimize travel time
- Ample discussion and workshop time with peers

ABOUT PAUL MENIG

Paul Menig, the founder of Business Accelerants, is a certified, licensed peer advisory council moderator. He has spent over 35 years developing the business side of high-tech components manufactured for General Electric, Eaton Corporation, and Daimler Truck. As an advisor, he has consulted with several hundred startups, family-owned enterprises, and small-cap public companies in manufacturing, technology, and transportation for automotive, truck, aerospace, medical equipment, industrial automation, and defense industries. His experience and expertise allow him to lead peer groups, quickly diagnose challenges, and create plans to help companies reach their goals.
